

Application Guide:

Indigenous Studies Master's Degree

The Indigenous Studies Master's Degree requires 30 credit hours and prepares students to become innovative scholars & leaders who bring Indigenous perspectives to academic, public service, and private sectors. To apply, you'll need to submit a personal statement, resume or CV, writing sample, transcripts, and three letters of recommendation. Each component helps us understand your academic background, research interests, and readiness for graduate study. Below is a detailed guide to help you prepare each part of your application.

Application Guide:

Indigenous Studies Graduate Certificate

The Graduate Certificate in Indigenous Studies prepares students to become innovative scholars & leaders who bring Indigenous perspectives to academic, public service, and private sectors. To apply, you'll need to read the below directs and follow the steps that align with your current academic status. Below is a detailed guide to help you prepare each part of your application.

Current KU Students

Current graduate students complete the online application and submit these required materials:

- a letter stating your interest in Indigenous studies and its relationship to your graduate course of study;
- a current advising report;
- a letter of support from your graduate degree program.

You must be in good standing with your graduate degree program to participate in the certificate program.

Non- KU Students

If you aren't currently enrolled at KU, you'll complete an online application, pay a $30 application fee and submit these required materials:

- a letter stating your interest in the Indigenous Studies graduate certificate;
- an official copy of your college transcript;
- two letters of recommendation from persons familiar with your academic work or potential for graduate study.

JOIN US

Apply Today:

<https://gograd.ku.edu/apply/>